ADR

Rupert is a well-known mediator who in the past five years has mediated more than 60 mediations ranging from multi-party disputes concerning terminal dilapidations to difficult family disputes involving claims based on proprietary estoppel and Inheritance Act claims. He qualified as a mediator in 2015 (ADR Group Accredited Civil and Commercial Mediator) and is a panel mediator at various organisations including:

- The Property Mediators
- Civil Mediation Council
- Costs Alternative Dispute Resolution (CADR)
- RICS/PLA Boundary Disputes Mediation Service
- ADR ODR International
- Wandsworth Mediation Service (Commercial Mediator)
- Chancery Bar Association's Pro Bono Mediation Scheme.

He is described as "a noteworthy mediator with particular expertise and experience in substantial property disputes. He frequently assists with cases concerning proprietary estoppel, service charge arrears and an array of issues arising between landlords and tenants" (Chambers and Partners – Mediators 2023).

Rupert is a firm believer in momentum in mediations. Whilst being empathetic and patient by nature he doesn't lose sight of the need to encourage parties to put on the table constructive offers at an early stage. His approach involves inviting the parties to do as much of the leg work as possible prior to the mediation by thinking about possible settlement structures and concessions. That enables him, after spending time with each party to understand their motivations and concerns, to move to the process of creatively shaping a settlement sooner rather than later.

Given his professional background he is in a position to use his own knowledge to suggest possible settlement proposals. In so doing he sustains the momentum of the mediation and, with a combination of empathy, patience, reality-testing and (where required) bluntness, creates the platform for a settlement.

Costs Litigation

Rupert is listed in both Legal 500 and Chambers & Partners as a leading junior in costs litigation. He is described as: “A go-to guru for costs cases at the junior level.” (Legal 500 – Costs Litigation, 2022). “A costs wizard who is clearly very able. Clients love him as he is both succinct and confident.” (Chambers & Partners – Costs Litigation, 2021)

Rupert regularly appears in the Court of Appeal, the High Court and the SCCO on costs matters ranging from Solicitors Act assessments, applications for security for costs, non-party costs orders and private prosecutions costs to name but a few.

He has also advised on a wide range of costs matters from costs issues in the context of group litigation / collective proceedings orders to the assignment of CFAs. He has particular experience in non-party costs orders, DBAs, the enforceability of CFAs, contentious business agreements and issues arising from litigation funding.
