Practice Summary

Joel practises across all three of Chambers' main practice areas with a focus on planning, infrastructure, environmental and property law. Given his commercial background, he has a particular focus on claims with a commercial element. In appropriate cases, Joel accepts instructions on a direct access and pro bono basis.

He has significant experience in obtaining injunctions and contempt proceedings to protect land and buildings from trespass and nuisance, particularly by protesters. He is very familiar with the intricate procedural and legal issues which arise in relation to claims brought against 'persons unknown'. In this field he has recently acted for National Highways, Shell and Exolum in response to direct action by groups such as 'Insulate Britain,' 'Extinction Rebellion' and 'Just Stop Oil.'

- Advising a global energy company on recovery of approx. £3m overpaid rent in respect of its petrol station sites.
- Appearing for the Claimant in the County Court in a preliminary hearing in an approx. £1m claim for damages for breach of contract related to the operation of a car boot sale business.
- Appearing for the successful professional recruitment company resisting a claim brought in the County Court by a potential recruit for breach of contract.
- Acting for an events planner claiming significant damages in the County Court against a venue and caterer for breach of contract.

- Advising a developer on the commercial and property law implications of adopting a particular structure for commercial property transactions.
- Acting for a landlord seeking to recover rent arrears from a commercial tenant resisting the claim on the basis that its lease was discharged by frustration of common purpose by the coronavirus business closure regulations.
- Providing advice and drafting on matters such as negligence, contractual interpretation, mistake, rectification and misrepresentation.

Joel is also currently acting as a Tribunal Secretary to Dame Elizabeth Gloster in two high-value commercial arbitrations (LCIA and HKAIC).

Prior to starting pupillage, Joel worked in the global litigation team of an oil major. During that time, he advised on various matters including enforcement proceedings, bilateral investment treaty claims, environmental and decommissioning claims, JV disputes and general commercial disputes in various upstream and downstream oil and gas sectors. He also gained experience in institutional arbitration under the LCIA, ICC and LMAA rules and worked on several multi-million-dollar arbitrations, including:

- An LMAA arbitration concerning the cause of two explosions aboard a large commercial ship that caused the ship to be taken off hire and contaminated the cargo aboard.
- Two related ICC arbitrations concerning indemnification under the French abrupt termination regime for losses/damages incurred following the decision to discontinue shipments of crude oil via a pipeline.
- An ICC arbitration concerning the French interdependence regime and unlawful termination of a European Gas Transportation Agreement.

Costs Litigation

Joel is developing a varied costs practice. His recent instructions include:
